JUBILEE HOSPITAL FINANCES

Annual Reports of President Hayward and Treasurer Chudley Presented.

To the Subscribers at the Annual Meeting held This Afternoon.

The old board of directors of the Jubilee hospital held their last business meeting yesterday evening, President Chas. Hayward in the chair. Hon. J. S. Helmcken's offer to deliver a lecture at the hospital was accepted with thanks. After routine business the directors spent several hours in preparing and discussing the annual reports for presentation at the meeting of the subscribers, which was held to-day.

There was a large attendance at the fourth annual meeting of the subscribers, held this afternoon at the city hall. President Hayward occupied the chair. The secretary, H. M. Yates, read the following report of the directors:

"Ladies and Gentlemen: The directors beg to submit the fourth annual report of the institution for the information of the donors, subscribers and the public generally.

"Owing to the depressed state of business in the city during the past year the revenue of the hospital has suffered considerably, and in March last an arrangement was made with the city council to place a by-law before the citizens for a loan of $35,000, and which has since been carried by a large majority. In January last the late Hon. J. D. Pemberton, bequeathed the munificent sum of $200 to the institution, which was largely supplemented by Mrs. J. D. Pemberton by a donation of $1500. The board, to express their appreciation of such a sum, have decided to erect a maternity ward (plans for which are now being prepared), to be named the "Pemberton Ward."

The estimated fees from pay patients of $12,000 has not been reached, the amount received this season being only $8,000.

The drainage of the hospital is still a source of much anxiety to the directors, and it is to be hoped now that the city has full representation that this will be attended to without delay.

The lighting of the hospital is still done with coal oil but it is hoped the city will now see its way clear to use electric light or gas.

The item of laundry is still heavy, but until proper drainage is adopted by the city and a laundry established at the hospital this cost is not likely to be materially lessened, owing to the enormous amount of work done at the institution.

The report of the resident medical officer shows a very large list of out patients treated, numbering 245 and 500 out door patients.

Dr. Richardson, the resident medical officer, has continued his earnest efforts in every way during the past year, and the harmonious working of the whole staff under his control is worthy of all commendation. The training school for nurses is in active operation, and is fully dealt with in his report.

The honorary treasurer's statement of accounts and report is likewise appended, as also that of the auditor, and gives a complete statement of the financial standing of the institution to the 31st May, 1894.

The list of donations has considerably fallen off from the previous year, owing, no doubt, as stated before, to depression in business.

The directors have again to thank all the visiting medical officers for their great attention at all times and their indefatigable efforts on all occasions to promote the welfare and popularity of the institution. The directors beg also to thank the very numerous donors of gifts of every description.

The thanks of the board are also due to the King's Daughters for fully furnishing a room set apart for the care of sick children; to the D. O. Society for their successful concert and bazaar in aid of the funds of the hospital; to the Arion club, the Ladies' Auxiliary, who have at all times and in many ways assisted the board; and to Messrs. Yates & Jay for the free use of their rooms for holding the meetings of the board.

In conclusion, the directors confidently appeal to the general public for a continuance of their liberality, and although the expenses may appear heavy, yet the great amount of good work done at the institution can only be obtained by an efficient staff and thorough equipments.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. M. YATES,
Secretary.

Approved at a meeting of the directors held this 29th day of June, 1894.

THE ANARCHISTS.

Santo, Carnot's Assassin, Attended a Meeting in Chicago Last October.

A Murderer Shadows Premier Crispi With a Knife—Arrested.

Chicago, June 29.—A story was current here to-day that Santo, the assassin of President Carnot, was in Chicago last October to attend a meeting of anarchists held here at the time. The story is that a meeting of anarchists was held in the office of Monroe Jackson, the Canadian halfbreed, who went to Washington with Coxey's army last October. It is said that 34 anarchists, representing nearly every country in Europe, assembled here at that time. So secretly had these men left their own countries that they were not missed for weeks and even then their whereabouts baffled the police of Europe. The fact of the meeting was kept so secret that none except favored disciples of dynamite knew what was going on. Among the delegates it is said was a young Italian named Cesare Giovanni Santo. Though scarcely 21 years old, he soon became prominent in the conference and his words became regarded as those of a leader. The names of other European and 50 American delegates cannot be learned except that of Herr Most. For two weeks the meetings were held night and day, the excitement attending the last few days of the world's fair rendered secrecy easy. When the conference closed the delegates went quickly and by different routes to their native countries. Oscar Neebe, when seen in his saloon in West Randolph street, admitted that he had heard that Santo had been in Chicago but declined to say anything further on the subject. Thomas Greiff, prominent in socialistic circles had also heard of Santo's visit to Chicago but did not believe it. Superintendent of Police Brennan did not place any credence in the story.

Rome, June 29.—The man who had been shadowing Premier Crispi yesterday afternoon was found loitering near Crispi's house last night. He declared he intended to square accounts with him. He was arrested and a large knife was found upon him.

Paris, June 29.—French representatives throughout the world have been instructed to thank the various governments for their expressions of sympathy.

Birmingham, Ala., June 29.—Thousands of copies of an alleged proclamation which is nothing less than an anarchist circular addressed to the government of Alabama and signed "Alabama Miners," are being scattered broadcast here. The circular makes demands at the hands of the governor that the shut down of the mines be declared off, that the men be allowed to go back to work at the old prices, and that the non-union element be sent away. The circular continuing, says: "That the wholesale arrest of our men cease by your withdrawing your standing advertisement offering a reward of $400 for each arrest. This must be done and by you. We are in no mood to be tampered with. We stipulate terms." The circular continues, saying that negotiations between the executive committee and the operators must be gone into not later than July 1st. It ends: "If the above demands are not complied with we will enforce them by force of arms if necessary. After date set any unfriendly move during the stipulated time will be resisted."

He will point out that the object which the college had in view at the start has been diverted, and now the institution is used for distributing patronage to the prejudice of the militia and the great expense of country.

THE FRENCH PRESIDENT.

Bitterness Displayed at the Socialist Demonstration.

Versailles, June 27.—The recount of the polls left Casimir-Perier's vote unchanged at 451. The votes of the other candidates, according to the recount, were: Brisson, 195; Dupuy, 97; Favrier, 53; Arago, 27. Scattering votes were cast for Cavaignac, Loubet, DeFreycinet, Rochefort, Toussaint and Fourens. After Challemel la Cour had read the form investing Casimir-Perier with the powers of the presidency, he made an emotional little speech, and then turning to the new President embraced him heartily. Casimir-Perier wept. He had not mastered his emotion while a delegation of journalists was admitted to congratulate him, but he managed to thank them warmly, adding: "Gentlemen, I belong to you. Discuss me, but never forget France and the republic while doing so."

A socialist demonstration after the decisive vote revealed such bitterness as even the extreme anarchist had rarely displayed before. The moment the new President was proclaimed Joseph Michelin shouted: "That is the vote of a shareholders' meeting. Shame upon you." Aime Levy howled: "Down with such action. The figures show that the reactionary ring has triumphed." Michelin paced the aisle waiving both arms and protested in earpiercing tones against the action of this so-called sovereign assembly, which refused to allow the consideration of a bill for the suppression of the Presidency. Dejounte and Clovis Hugues behaved as if bereft of reason. They gesticulated, ran from deputy to deputy, and shouted their approval of Michelin's declarations. They became orderly only from sheer physical exhaustion. As the calls form the rostrum for closure grew louder, Dejounte rallied himself with this declaration: "I desire to declare that you have triumphed here by means of a reactionary coalition, but the Republic will triumph in the name of labor and the people. Mchelin mounted the rostrum to utter his final denunciation. "You are usurpers," he cried, "you try to impose your will upon the people; you wish to be the masters, but the people are the real sovereign in France, and they will resume you of the power."

The altercations did not end with the proceedings of the assembly, for the officials had hardly left their seats before M. Pelletin, editor of La Justice and radical deputy, fell foul of Armand Schramack, chief secretary to the chief perfect of police. Schramack assumed a threatening attitude, but he was held at bay by Pelletin's friends and eventually, at their request, was ejected from the palace by the ushers. The troops had been massed at the St. Lazarre station to attend the new president and escort him from the train to the foreign office. When it was learned that he would return in the carriage they were marched out to Sevres to meet him. The appearance of the city was the same as usual after the news of the election arrived, but for a slight crowding of the boulevards and the streets along the President's route via Sevres, the Bois de Boulogne, the Arc de Triomphe and the Champs Elysee. The people saluted M. Casimir-Perier with cheers and the waving of hats and handkerchiefs. As the President approached the foreign office on the Quay d'Orsay the officers removed for the time the crape from their swords, tri-color was hoisted over the building and a band played "La Marseillaise." The reception at the foreign office was very brief. After the president returned to his apartments in the chamber of deputies. He will preside at the cabinet meeting to be held at 8:30 to-morrow morning, and will receive from Premier Dupuy before noon the formal notice of the cabinet's resignation.

PRESIDENT PERIER.

Grandson of the Great Perier, a Conservative Republican.

Like Sadie Carnot, Jean Casimir Perier comes of a distinguished family, and is the grandson of the "great Casimir Perier," prime minister under Louis Philippe. His family has given to its country notabilities in finance, commerce, industry, politics and even the church, for there has existed a Bishop Perier of Avignon, whose only fault in his time was to be a constitutional ecclesiastical dignitary; and a woman of piety, courage and abnegation, who founded the society of the Nuns of the Sacred Heart in America and died in the odor of sanctity at St. Louis. The Perier family descends from a notary who exercised his profession in the vicinity of Grenoble, in Dauphine, in the latter half of the 17th century. The family prospered, for we find that in 1775 the son of the notary purchased the royal castle of Vizille from the Duke of Villeroy, and lived there in a state becoming a wealthy proprietor. A niece of Claude married a distinguished barrister of Grenoble, whose mother bore the name of Enfantin, destined to become notorious in the socialistic annals of our epoch. It was their daughter, Rose Phillipine Duchesne-Perier, born in August, 1769, at Grenoble, who died in November, 1842, in the United States, after many years spent in America in religious life and accomplishing heroic actions which compare gloriously with those of more honored and famed heroines in fiction and history. At the early age of 7 little Rose had no greater pleasure than to read Roman history; she was singularly attracted by the study of that race, which we are told seemed created to "act and suffer bravely." However, her parents, judging that her education had to be completed by other teachings, placed her in a convent where the lady superior was not long in recognizing that the child promised to develop an irresistible vocation for religious life, and she wisely determined to do nothing to precipitate it. When the reign of terror was inaugurated the Perier family had already settled in Paris, but the Duchesnes lived on the estates they owned in their native province, and owing to the grave political events, Rose Phillippine was not able to take the veil and pronounce her final vows until 1801. Shortly after she entered into communication with Mme. Barat, the founder of the Order of the Sacred Heart. The two women had the same ardent faith, the same ambitions and the same aims in view. Mme. Duchesne—as she was henceforth called—became, as it were, the lieutenant of Mme. Barat, and resolved to implant on the American soil the order, which was already flourishing in France and becoming known all over Europe. She expatriated herself, and spent the remainder of her active life in the United States, carrying the Gospel to savages, teaching pauper children to read and write, assisting the destitute, tending the sick, burying the dead, feeding the hungry, and founding everywhere churches, schools and asylums for the aged, hospitals and workshops. Missionary of the church, pioneer of civilization, earning the palms of which she was found so worthy, she was wholly unconscious of the neglect and want of appreciation of an indifferent world and ungrateful country, which seemed to have forgotten her. The highest ambition of Mme. Duchesne was to christianize and civilize the savages; she loved them as fervently as St. Teresa loved the Castilians. She hailed with intense joy and gratitude the announcement that she was to accompany the mission sent to the far west with that object in view. "The news gives me a second youth," she wrote; "I feel as one born afresh!" She was then 71, and the only complaint she was ever heard to make was that her advanced years would prevent her from rescuing from heathen barbarism so many of her poor savages. There are no more heathen savages in the field of her whole labors, but in all the big capitals of America and Europe there are men as benighted and dangerous, and less easily swayed and weaned from their evil courses. The present members of the Periet-Duchesne family, the near relative of the saintly Rose and of France's greatest statesman, has before him the difficult task of fighting the anarchists and protecting his countrymen against their fanaticism. President Perier is very wealthy, and can in no way be accused of yielding to temptation for financial gain. His father was minister of the interior under President Theirs, and Casimir was his efficient aid. He is a thorough Republican. He became prime minister late in 1893, and resigned a few weeks ago, taking advantage of an adverse vote in the chamber of deputies. He was glad to leave office, in order to improve his chances for election to the presidency when Carnot's time expired next December. He soon after became president of the chamber of deputies. Perier made a great reputation as prime minister. The anarchists had terrified the former ministry, but Perier hanged the bomb demons. He took a prominent part in the Franco-Russian fetes, and rigorously suppressed all anarchist demonstrations. His stern measures against anarchism and his vigorous hostility to socialism made the bourgeois, or middle class, look upon him as their savior, and he is of all public men in France the most distasteful to the socialists. However, the socialists do not use the dagger and the bomb, but agitation and the ballot, and in France they are making prodigious progress. Casimir Perier is a genial, shrewd, kindly man, of agreeable manners and polite address, whose countenance is a truthful index to his character, although it bears, when more closely observed, a strange expression of melancholy, sometimes amounting to sadness, which seems inconsistent with his general character. He is in the prime of life, in excellent health and full of energy.

KEEP YOUR MOUTH SHUT.

Dangers of Breathing Through Anything but the Proper Channel.

Great numbers of people go through life with their mouths open day and night. They take into the delicate organs of the mouth and the lungs the dust of the street, which is filled with the germs of disease, and they breathe into the lungs without the protection intended by nature the noxious elements in the atmosphere, and lay the seeds of pulmonary disease and of many other beginnings of imperfect health. A prominent physician in Boston, acting as a throat specialist, remarked that he would have nothing to do if people could only be taught to keep their mouths shut. If you notice people on the street, you will find that a large proportion of them keep their mouths habitually open, and that they breathe through the mouth instead of the nostrils, never having been taught that this is the special function and use of the nose. In many cases the nostrils have become so impaired by disuse that they are practically filled up, so that it is impossible to breathe through them, and then it is only after a great deal of effort that they are made to resume their natural function. The importance of breathing through the nose is very great in the case of public speakers and readers, who, if they take in air through the mouth, are usually afflicted with dryness of the throat, which speedily devlops into some form of bronchial disease. This is the origin of the clergyman's sore throat. People living in the country, and never thinking of the use of the nostrils, easily form the habit of ignoring their use. It is said that people who sleep with their mouths open are usually snorers. The habit of disusing the nostrils is one that is overcome with difficulty, but unless it is formed people living in cities expose themselves needlessly to all sorts of diseases that attack and enfeeble the lungs.—Boston Herald.

"It has cured others and it will cure you" is true only of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The motto suits the medicine and the medicine suits the motto. What better assurance could you have that a medicine will cure you than the fact that it has cured such multitudes of others?

BOTH WERE CONSIDERATE.

The Burglar and the Burglarized Came to Terms Amicably.

An almost unprecedented instance in the burglary line occurred a week or so ago in Kanda district, Tokyo. In the small hours of the morning a suspicious noise was heard in the dwelling of a druggist in Koyanagi-cho, and his son, who was bedridden, awoke to find a robber, armed with a dirk, just entering the room. The invalid gave a loud cry, which awoke and immediately brought the druggist to the spot. The thief appeared to be nonplussed, and when angrily addressed replied, his teeth chattering with fright, that this was his first attempt at robbery. The druggist himself, distrustful of the ugly-looking knife, told the thief that there was nothing in the house and that he had better go home. "But after taking all the trouble to break in," said this curious burglar, "you might let me have just a little. I'm a poor man and cannot afford to work for nothing." The druggist "pitied" him—we quote from a vernacular contemporary—and handed him a yen banknote and 50 sen in copper. The latter the burglar refused, saying that what you was quite sufficient for his immediate wants, and then this remarkable scene came to a close. It would seem that both were very timid people, this being the burglar's first appearance in public, while the druggist, despite the proverbially unstrained quality of mercy—was evidently in the bluest of funks.—Japan Mail.

OUR ENGLISH LETTER.

For the Moment Politics Are Terribly Dull—The Labor Candidates.

Turf News—Manchester Ship Canal—A New Diet—Corbett's Engagement.

(From our Own Correspondent.)

Southport, June 12, 1894.—Taking a glance at the political world I may say in the words of Lord Salisbury, when speaking at a banquet in St. James' hall, London, on Friday night: "For the moment politics are terribly dull." The finance bill is still engaging the attention of the house of commons, but dragging its length along slowly. For instance, last Monday week the first clause of eight lines, after four days' debate, in which not a word had been altered, at length passed through committee. On that night Commander Bethell, a Conservative, proposed an amendment challenging the principle of graduation in the death duties, but was defeated by a majority. Mr. Balfour, Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Heneage and other members of the opposition left the house without voting, and five Conservatives supported the government. Thus is progress made. The debates are not primed with anything noteworthy, or indeed unusual.

Adverting to the question of pensions, I see that the chancellor of the exchequer announced a few days ago that the government did not intend to fill the vacancy created under the political offices pension act of 1869 by the death of Lord Emly, until the house of commons had had an opportunity of considering whether or not the act itself should be repealed. A bill to repeal the act has been introduced, which makes an exception in the case of existing pensions, but its "effect would be that no pension in future be granted without an application to parliament in each case." The amount of Lord Emly's pension was £1200 a year.

The registration bill does not appear to have much chance this session.

Seventeen candidates have already been selected by the independent labor party, of which ten are to contest seats now held by Liberals and seven seats now held by Conservatives. An exchange of compliments seems to be taking place between Mr. Kier Hardie, M. P., and Mr. T. W. Russell, M. P., the teetotal Ulster Liberal Unionist. In Mr. Hardie's paper, the Labor Leader, there is an interview with Mr. Russell, who is described as being "one of the men who have a certain puritanic fibre in their composition, and who in the days to come will be the backbone of the socialist movement." Mr. Russell thinks the independent labor party is right in its policy.

For the first time the Scotch grand committee met last week, and it is said conducted its business with dispatch and a thorough absence of partisanship. It was engaged in dealing with the preliminary clauses of the local government bill for Scotland, and a singular feature in the proceedings was that in the divisions there was a good deal of cross voting. About 60 members were present out of the 87 of which the committee is composed. One grievance about which the Scotch members have often complained is at last about to be remedied. The small salaries of the Scotch law officers of the crown have often been held up to the notice of the house of commons, and it is generally assumed that the late solicitor-general for Scotland (Mr. Asher) resigned his post because of the serious financial loss its retention would have involved. At Thursday's meeting the subject came up for discussion, and Sir George Trevelyan announced that the government would deal with it at once.

Sir John Gorst, Conservative M. P., has been spending six weeks at Toynbee Hall, Whitechapel, in studying the poorest parts of the East End of London. It appears that he finds less discontent than he expected. Most of the people, he says, seemed to regard their hard lot as inevitable, and were disposed to make the most of it. He did not think there was the material for a revolution among them. Nearly all the thoughtful people in the East End were socialists, rather of the Fabian type; many called themselves anarchists, but he very soon discovered that by that term they did not mean men who threw bombs. They meant only a further development of socialism. Their theory was that ultimately we should do altogether without coercive government. They had a great antipathy to the rich, ground landlords, and to wealthy men generally, whom they denounced as capitalists.

The great trial of the Sutherland will suit was to have commenced before Sir Francis Jeune last Thursday, but, to general surprise, a compromise was effected at the last moment. The action, which was said to involve very sensational evidence, was brought by the present Duke of Sutherland to prevent the probate of his father's will, which left all his property, with the exception of the comparatively unimportant entailed estates, to the dowager duchess, who was his second wife. The amount at issue exceeded a million and a half, and up to Thursday all efforts, several of which came from eminent personages, to effect a settlement proved abortive. However, the arrangement then arrived at was that the duchess was to receive £500,000, together with an annuity of £5000. The Prince of Wales arrived at the law courts to be present at the trial, but did not enter the probate court on being informed that the action had been settled.

Last Wednesday the Derby was easily won by the favorite, Lord Rosebery's Ladas, Lord Alington's Matchbox being second and Mr. T. Canno's Reminder third. It was of course an immensely poplar victory. Ladas has had up till now an unchecked career. As a two-year-old he carried off the Woodcote stakes, worth £925; the Coventry stakes, £1678; the Champagne stakes, £1250; and Middle Park plate, £1915. This season the colt has gained the Two Thousand Guineas, Newmarket stakes, £3795, and the Derby, £5450, making a total of £8,[illegible].

The turf infection of the moment had apparently affected the equanimity of one of the judges of the high courts of justice, who, it is said, not only adjourned his court for the day of the Newmarket meeting, but hurried business so rapidly on the Derby day that, had he wished he might have gone down to Epsom by the special train. The matter was made the subject of a short discussion in the house of commons on Friday night.

Lord Alington and Sir Frederick Johnstone, the owners of Matchbox, have sold the horse for £15,000 to Baron de Hirsch, with a contingency of a further sum of £5000 in the event of the colt winning the Grand Prize of Paris on Sunday next, in which it will, as in the Derby, be ridden by M. Cannon.

Strikes among the different sections of industry are now becoming so common of occurrence that one has only to lift up his evening journal to become at once au courant with such evidence. Thus it is that the word "strike" sounds not with the same thrilling tone as of yore, but of course still reveals the fact of an unharmonious note in the otherwise comparatively tuneful theme chanted by struggling humanity. Public attention has just been called to the great cab strike in London. As in the late great coal strike Lord Rosebery proved a successful mediator, so in this instance Mr. Asquith's (the home secretary) intervention has been attended with success. It is well said, though these acts mean a serious addition to the work of the ministery, "that if ministers could be assured of the same success as Lord Rosebery and Mr. Asquith, not one would grudge the effort and the expenditure of time to save workingmen's families from struggles with starvation, to avoid the waste of capital lying idle, to set the example of conciliation, and to promote industrial peace." The occasion, however has not been an unmixed evil—it has drawn attention to the excessive number of cabs and to the unsatisfactory system of controlling them.

A long and important statement with regard to the ship canal was made at the Manchester city council meeting on Wednesday by Sir John Harwood. Sir John fully described the different stages through which the work had been carried since 1891, when the Manchester corporation took a share in the liability for an oversight of the canal. He estimated the revenue for 1894 and 1895 at £50,000 a year, and this, after interest had been paid, would leave a deficiency at the end of 1895 of £146,862, which would need a rate of 1s. 7 1-8d. to cover. The more important matter of the statement was that in which he dealt with the future. There are, he said, "numerous and onerous obligations entered into by the ship canal company under their various acts of parliament to which our attention was never called, and the real meaning of which has only been brought to light now on a request of mine for a complete list of all obligations, undertakings and engagements to which the ship canal company are liable. A perusal thereof reveals a state of things which I can only characterize as most serious in regard to the future prospects of the undertaking." The statement was explicit enough, but when it has been carefully weighed—remembering the vastness of the undertaking—its hopeful as well as its condemnatory side can be found.

"Farewell, Othello's occupation's gone." This wail would appear about to be murmured by the cooks of Paris with respect to their professional duties, if the small number of adherents of Macdonald, the new diet reform prophet there, be universally added to. It is a part of the system Macdonald advocates never to eat or drink anything but vegetable foods and natural liquids, precisely in the state in which they are found in nature. Hot drinks of all kinds are especially condemned, although it is not quite easy to see how the use of water from natural hot springs would run counter to the principle laid down. Macdonald himself eats oatmeal, which, as a Scotchman, he thinks not only extremely nourishing, but palatable as well.

A boxing contest in the local home of opera is a novelty truly, but such is the case. There is appearing at the royal court theatre, Liverpool, the latest Drury Lane success, "Gentleman Jack," in which Mr. James J. Corbett, the champion boxer of the world, will appear. Another character in the drama is taken by Mr. John Donaldson, who fought Sullivan eight years ago. In the fifth act there is a reproduction of the scene at the Olympic club, New Orleans, where Corbett and Sullivan fought.

The unsettled weather which we have lately been experiencing has caused disappointment to the promoters of many agricultural shows which have been held in various parts of the country during the past few weeks. Locally we were fortunate enough to experience a good day, and the annual exhibition of the Ormskirk and Southport society was as a result a great success. The Royal Agricultural society holds its annual meeting at Cambridge from June 23 to 29.

A DUTCH PIRATE.

Career of an Outlaw Who Preyed Upon the Spaniards.

Brasiliano, the Dutchman expelled from Barzil at the Portuguese invasion, was another who, having taken refuge in the British colony and being anxious to get on, "saw no way so likely to do it as by turning pirate," in which line he soon distinguished himself by the same qualities. He feared nothing, avoided no danger, and always went upon the most difficult enterprises." This was, indeed, the golden rule of piracy, which, accidents apart, always led to success.

Vessel after vessel did Brasiliano and his friends take, regularly returning to Port Royal to squander away their gold in every kind of debauchery. On sea or on land "nothing could withstand the valor of these desperadoes." Then shrank from no encounter at any odds, and their victories were generally followed by "horrid cruelties with which they tortured the poor Spaniards in a manner shocking to relate,' partly in order to get more money, partly, it seems, in mere wantonness of fury. Whatever they got was, however, spent in a very short time, the pirates being quickly reduced to beggary. They have been known to spend two thousand or three thousand pieces of eight in one night." On these occasions wine literally flowed down the streets. The successful buccaneers insisted upon every one partaking of their hospitality; at other times they showered the beverage about the streets, wetting the clothes of passers by, which seemed to them an "excellent diversion." Some persons objected, doubtless, but on the whole it was considered good for trade.

When poverty on one occasion drove Brasiliano to sea again, he, like Bartholomew, was captured while calmly "viewing the fort of Campeachy." The governor determined to hang him and his crew, but their captain had the address to write a letter, as from other pirates, threatening horrid cruelties to any of the Spanish nation who should ever fall into their hands. And this letter had the desired effect, so well known where both the courage and cruelty of the pirate community. The [illegible]

BY-LAW

Sewerage Commissioners' Appointment and Sewerage Assessment By-Law.

Whereas the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Victoria has by resolution passed on the 22nd day of January, 1894, deemed it advisable to extend the system of sewerage adopted by the said Council in 1890 in order to completely sewer the portion of the City of Victoria in the area bounded by the following streets: Douglas street from Herald street to Humboldt street, Humboldt street, and Wharf from Douglas street to Johnson street, Store street from Johnson to Herald street, Herald street from Store street to Douglas street.

And whereas a by-law to raise the sum of $100,000 for sewerage purposes upon the credit of the muncipality of the corporation of the said city, cited as the Sewerage Loan By-law, 1894, received the assent of the electors of the said municipality on the 15th day of May last past:

And whereas under and by virtue of the powers conferred upon the said Council by the Municipal Act, 1892, the Municipal Act Amendment Act, 1893, and the Municipal Act Amendment Act, 1894, the said council may, subject to the provisions contained in the said Acts, pass by-laws for the appointment by the said Council, by resolution, of a Commission or Commissioners (not exceeding three in number in all) to manage and superintend the construction of sewerage work, and to define his or their duties, and fix his or their salaries or other remuneration as the Council may by by-law decide:

Therefore the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Victoria enacts as follows:

1. The said Council may appoint by resolution one or more person or persons (not, however, exceeding three in all) to be Commissioner or Commissioners to manage and superintend the construction of sewerage work in the area above described, and in any block or blocks of land adjoining the said area if the Council decide to carry on sewerage work therein.

COMMISSIONERS' DUTIES.

2. The duty of the said Commissioner or Commissioners shall be—

(a.) To carry out the said sewerage work as funds may from time to time be placed at their disposal, and to see that all contracts entered into by the corporation in connection therewith be properly carried out, and to do all other things necessary to facilitate the successful operation of the said work.

(b.) To appoint and fix the salary of and remove any Inspector or any other person (other than permanent officers of the Corporation) in the employment of the Corporation in connection with the said sewerage work, and to appoint other persons in their places if deemed necessary; Provided always that the Commissioner or Commissioners shall not have the power to appoint any such person for a longer period than their own term of office, and any such person can be dismissed by the Commissioner or Commissioners, or by the Council, and all such appointments shall be made subject to the provisions of this subsection.

(c.) To examine all accounts and claims in respect of the said sewerage work, and to certify the same, to sign all checks drawn in respect of the said accounts and claims, the said checks to be countersigned by the Mayor for the time being of the said city before payment.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY TIMES.
ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY TIMES.

TO THE ELECTORS —OF— Victoria City Electoral District.

Gentlemen:—The general election now being near at hand, and being a candidate for re-election, I wish to place my views on some of the questions commanding your attention, as well as to intimate the line of action which I shall take and the measures which I shall, if opportunity permits, support and maintain.

The party now in power have practically held office for over eleven years. Their policy has been an indefinite one on many of the questions requiring consideration. At the last general election the Opposition advocated reform in the land laws of the province, and have been able to make some important changes.

The privilege of allowing speculators and non-residents to take up large tracts of land has been taken away and the lands are now available for actual settlers.

By the efforts of the Opposition the assessment of the wild land has been much increased; the ad valorem principle of assessment according to the land value, is now the law.

There are two essential matters yet to be carried out in connection with the encouraging of agricultural settlers. First, the surveying of available lands for such a purpose and giving the necessary information by the Lands and Works Department; second, the making of roads to such settlements, so that the farmer may be able to bring his produce to market—such a policy as this must be adopted in order to develop and encourage the farming industry of our province. By so doing we shall add much to our wealth and prosperity.

The railway policy of the Government has not been a business-like one. From the time of the grant given to the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway down to the Nakusp & Slocan deal, the interests of the province and the welfare of the people have not been well guarded. On the one hand a corporation receives a large subsidy and an immense tract of land free from taxation for ever; on the other, a private company is subsidized by guaranteeing the bonds to the full cost of the road as well as interest on the same for twenty-five years. One cannot but come to the conclusion that a Government policy of such character is likely to bring the credit of the province into disrepute.

Monopolies of any kind are to be deplored, but monopolies backed by Government aid and support are often the most difficult to overcome. Government aid to such an extent as has been given in the instances referred to, precludes other roads from being assisted or built. As an instance of this we recognize the difficulty the British Pacific Railway will have in dealing with the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway and its existing rights. Thus by the action of the present Government in the past it looks as if the province were at the mercy of ringsters and monopolists who are despoiling the people of their heritage.

I am opposed to the executive using its power to make large appropriations of money by special warrant for roads, streets, bridges, and public works, without first submitting such to the legislature. Such a course of action leads to favoritism and corruption and is not in accord with the principles of constitutional government.

I have advocated, and will continue to do so, the reduction of taxation on improvements and the abolition of taxes on mortgages. The latter impost presses doubly hard upon the borrower, and the repeal of this law would be in the interest and for the advancement of the province.

The practice followed on the eve of a general election of promising aid to public works and institutions by members of the executive should be condemned, as it is attempting to bribe the electors with their own money. The independent electors should answer this by sending men to the Legislature who will do their utmost to remove such ministers from power.

During the past four years legislation has been brought about, chiefly by the Opposition, in reforming the School Law. The residents of the cities have now greater power over the management of their schools, and more is yet desired in this particular. I shall use my best endeavors to bring this about, so that our schools may be free of all political influences.

I have also advocated further restriction on Chinese immigration and the employment of Chinese by any company seeking charters or grants from the Legislature. I have advocated and still maintain that a clause should be inserted in all bills giving such privileges or aid to prevent the employment of this class of labor.

I also have advocated the necessity of employing residents of the province instead of non-residents or foreigners in the prosecution of all works or contracts let by the government.

It is impossible in an address of this kind to touch on all questions affecting the province. I hope, however, before long to have the opportunity of addressing the electors in public meeting, at which time I will refer to matters more extensively.

Hoping that my past record as a representative in the Local Legislature has been acceptable to you, I again seek your votes and support.

I remain, yours respectfully,

G. L. MILNE.

TO THE ELECTORS —OF— Victoria City Electoral District.

Gentlemen—As a candidate in the coming contest for legislative honors, and particularly as a labor candidate, I take this method of expressing some of the views I hold relating to the good government of the province.

I believe that heretofore, although workingmen have assisted largely in electing representatives to the legislature and parliament, their interests have not, generally speaking, been advanced or guarded; but on the contrary laws have been enacted whereby the greater burden of taxation has been placed upon the shoulders of the workingman, and monopolies have been fostered to the detriment of their interests and the country at large. Too many professional men and capitalists have made or influenced the making of our laws, and I believe that a remedy may be applied by workingmen being represented in the councils of our land by men from their own ranks—men who are not only in sympathy with them, but who are in touch with their necessities.

I believe that every man is entitled to an equitable share of what his labor produces; also that enterprise and ability to organize and direct labor to the accomplishment of large undertakings deserves special consideration, but not to the extent that it is often accorded by the governments of the present day.

I would advocate a reduction in the hours of labor, and consider an eight hour law should be established by the government and enforced on all government work.

Also the establishment of a provincial labor bureau for the purpose of gathering reliable information on the labor situation, so that intending immigrants may be made fully acquainted with the true state of the labor market in the province.

I believe that as a class the Chinese are injurious to the province, as they undoubtedly ridicule our religion and laws; introduce loathsome diseases and demoralizing habits; they trade exclusively among themselves and send what wealth they may acquire from our province to enrich their own empire. I believe the government should make every effort to lessen the evil which is the result of the presence of Coolie labor, and in the absence of laws similar to those in force in Australia, our government should, when granting privileges to companies and corporations, insist on a clause in the charters granted prohibiting the employment of Asiatic labor by such corporations or companies.

I advocate a liberal railway policy, feeling sure that we must have these most important highways to assist in developing the many latent resources of the province, but am opposed to the granting of monopolies in land for speculative purposes to companies to the exclusion of settlers.

I also believe that all religious questions should be kept out of our schools, being confident that the numerous religious institutions are quite capable of dealing with that matter.

I will more fully express my views on these questions at public meetings to be held. Hoping you can see your way clear to give me your support at the polls, I am, Yours respectfully,

[illegible]

TO THE ELECTORS —OF— Victoria City Electoral District.

Gentlemen:—As I am a candidate to represent you in the Provincial Legislature, I wish to give my views on some of the important questions of the day.

I hold that each man is entitled to all his labor produces; therefore, no tax should be levied on the products of labor.

The road tax, the provincial revenue tax, personal property tax, mortgage tax, taxes on improvements, and all taxes on useful trades and industries are unjust and should be abolished.

To carry out these principles, I am in favor of raising all public revenues for provincial and municipal purposes by a tax upon land values, irrespective of improvements.

This tax would lower rents, raise wages, encourage industry, equalize opportunities, and thereby benefit all.

The present electoral system gives unequal representation, and calls for legislative reform.

The monetary deposit now required from candidates for the provincial legislature should be abolished.

I am in favor of passing laws to exclude Asiatic labor from government works and prohibiting any further Asiatic immigration. When Chinese labor can be excluded from any works, by inserting clauses to that effect in charters and grants, it should be done.

I advocate a reduction in the hours of labor; an eight hour law should be established by the government and enforced on all government works.

I am in favor of establishing a Small Debts Court, to enable merchants and others to collect accounts with as little loss of time and money as possible.

I am an independent supporter of the opposition, because I feel they are inclined to go farthest in the direction of the reforms which I advocate; at the same time I wish it distinctly understood I am for measures and not for men.

As canvassing by a candidate is, in my opinion, contrary to the spirit of the ballot, it is not my intention to personally ask for votes. Trusting you may deem me a fit and proper person to represent you in the legislature, I hereby earnestly solicit your votes and influence. Faithfully yours,

W. G. CAMERON.

TO THE ELECTORS

—OF THE—

VICTORIA CITY

ELECTORAL DISTRICT.

GENTLEMEN:

Owing to the large number of Voters on the list it will be quite Impossible for us to see you personally, and we therefore take this means of addressing you, to respectfully request your support at the approaching Provincial Election for the return of four members to represent this City, which takes place on the 7th JULY, A.D. 1894, and will be Held at the CITY MARKET.

If elected, we shall give our hearty support to the present Government, which has done so much to promote the general advancement and prosperity of the Province,

We shall also use every endeavor to secure such legislation as has for its object the further development of the Province, and of this City in particular; to so harmonize capital and labor as to make profitable employment for both; to assist the settlement of the agricultural districts by all legitimate means; to continue the present system of free non-sectarian education, and to aid the passage of all laws which will tend to ensure the liberty, happiness and general welfare of the people of the Province.

Take Away

a stone from a foundation and it is weakened; a picket from a fence gives it an ill appearance, the vacancy destroys its symmetry, and the void is at once apparent. A hole the size of a pin's head in a kitchen utensil detracts from its usefulness, and a spoke from the wheel of a vehicle at once causes comment. It is the same with the mouth of a human being. An absent tooth gives the mouth the appearance of an "aching void." The symmetry is forever gone, the features are distorted, and already the process of decay has begun. In time other teeth "go by the board," and then succeeds a row of blackened and disfigured stumps. Crown and bridge work is a specialty in dental science, and of which Dr. H. B. Findley is a master. By these processes the mouth is made whole, decay of teeth arrested and the features restored to their original appearance.

THAT SIDNEY DENIAL.

The premier and Captain Robertson had a slight controversy at Sidney in regard to the discussion in the house wherein the late Premier Robson and Mr. Booth told Mr. Davie he was making statements that were not true. Mr. Davie seems to have entered his usual sweeping denial and therefore to have again taken liberties with the truth. The debate alluded to occurred in the house on April 15, 1891, and had for its subject the Sunday closing bill, which Mr. Robson introduced. Following is a portion of the report which appeared in the Times a few days afterwards:

Hon. Mr. Robson—I can't understand why the attorney-general sets himself in opposition to legislation of this kind, such as is in force in Australia and the other provinces.

Hon. Mr. Davie—The Sunday law has been abolished in many states of the union.

Hon. Mr. Robson—It is very easy to make rambling, raving statements, but exaggerations such as these are outrageous. There may be occasionally places where the law is not carried out. There are places where all the crimes on the calendar are committed, but that is no reason why crime should not be legislated against. To say in the bold, unqualified way the attorney-general has done that all the hotels violate the law is saying what he does not know, or wilfully saying what is untrue. I do not say whether he knows or not, but he cannot know from his own observation. When he says that they are abolishing the Sunday law in the states of the union, it is not true. There is not a state that is abolishing it. It is true that there are seven states which have no Sunday law, but there is no going back at all. I am astonished and ashamed that a member of the house—a member of the government particularly—should have made such unfounded and unjustifiable statements.

Mr. Martin—I appreciate the motives of the house; but one ought to do as he would be done by. It is going back a hundred years—indeed, farther back than that, to the days of Queen Elizabeth—to legislate as the premier wants hon. members to do. Let a man do as he likes on Sunday. I say let him go to church and be religious if he chooses, and let him not be made fun of for so doing. Let him go shooting if he likes. I don't believe in interfering with the liberty of the subject. I am just as religious a man as any in this house, yet I and the member for Kootenay have been held up in the churches and declared to have no rights to seats in this house. I know of a clergyman in Victoria who is always preaching abstinence, yet I know that the brewers have been in the habit of taking beer to his house after dark. It is not fair for gentlemen in the pulpit to hold up members to public execration. Nobody has a right to talk about me and my fellow members as some people have done.

Mr. Booth—I agree with the leader of the government. What the attorney-general has said is not true. There may be some small dens which are kept like Freemasons' conclaves, where liquor is sold on Sundays; but as a rule the law in Ontario is carried out.

Hon. Mr. Davie—I do not like to obtrude my own views upon the house, but in answer to the gentleman who has just spoken I will repeat that what I said is the truth. Moreover, he can ask anyone who goes to Ottawa if what I said is not true. As for the premier, if he chooses to brand me as a liar, if he thinks conduct such as this is seemly, all very well. I have been surprised and grieved that he should have made so wanton an attack on a colleague. If he will inquire he will find that I have not exaggerated at all in speaking as I have done. I know what it was in Ontario and at Ottawa when I was there.

Hon. Mr. Robson—I don't deny that it is possible to find disreputable houses; but I affirm that what the attorney-general has said is one of the grossest caricatures on those people. I know my honorable friend can find such places as he describes, and go into them if he likes, but they are few and far between. It is a gross slander on the other provinces to say what he has said, and it is impossible that it should be so under the system which exists.

Hon. Mr. Davie—But it does.

Hon. Mr. Robson—It does not.

No extended comment need be added. Any person who can read will see clearly for himself that Mr. Robson accused Mr. Davie of saying what was not true, and that Mr. Booth agreed with Mr. Robson. The premier did nothing to lessen his reputation for untruthfulness when he made that denial at Sidney.

THAT CHINESE SCHEME.

A good many people seem to have been unaware of the existence of the letter written in 1892 by the solicitors of the Canada Western Railway company to the attorney-general, which Dr. Milne read at Wednesday evening's meeting. Probably all but a few had forgotten, if they had ever been aware of the fact, that the promoters proposed an opening of the flood gates so that Chinese might pour into the province to do the work of the road. What the great majority of the people of Victoria will think of the proposal we need not ask; nor is there any doubt as to what they will say of the "gall" required to make such a proposition. Mr. Rithet and his colleagues in the company can hardly have supposed that this Chinese importation would prove agreeable to the people, whatever members of the government might think of it. As the letter appears to have been so little known to the public, we take the liberty of reproducing it once more:

Victoria, B. C., 19th Aug., 1892.

To the Hon. Attorney-General, James Bay, City:

Re Canadian Western Central Railway Company—

Sir,—We have the honor to draw your attention to two matters which are of considerable interest to us in view of our present negotiations.

It is, as you are perhaps aware, our intention to build the island portion of the road exclusively by means of white labor; but upon the mainland, in view of the financial aid which is being given to the road, we fear its construction cannot be successfully undertaken EXCEPT UPON CONDITION OF PERFORMING THE WORK TO A LARGE EXTENT WITH CHINESE LABOR.

Under the present Dominion regulations upon the subject, the number of Chinamen which can be imported into the country is limited. It is our intention, as soon as our arrangements are completed, to begin the work and push it through with all possible speed; and in that connection we should, IF CHINESE LABOR IS EMPLOYED, PLACE UPON THE GROUND AS RAPIDLY AS POSSIBLE A LARGE FORCE OF WORKMEN. UNDER THE PRESENT SYSTEM IT WOULD BE IMPOSSIBLE FOR US TO IMPORT THEM IN SUFFICIENT NUMBERS WITHIN THE TIME WHICH WILL ACCORD WITH OUR OTHER PLANS.

It appears to us that an arrangement might be effected by the Dominion government by means of which the embargo may be raised for a limited time. THIS WOULD ENABLE US TO BRING UPON THE SPOT WITHIN A SHORT TIME ALL THE CHINAMEN WHICH WE WISH TO EMPLOY, AND THEN THE NOW EXISTING STATE OF THE LAW, IF THOUGHT ADVISABLE, COULD BE REVERTED TO.

We are willing, in that event, to enter into a contract with the government to keep all these workmen under our own control during the whole period of the construction of the road, and afterwards to arrange for their return to their native land. WE APPREHEND THERE WILL BE NO DIFFICULTY ON OUR PART IN CARRYING OUT SUCH AN ARRANGEMENT. These men will be employed upon the mainland section only, and FROM THE CHARACTER OF THE COUNTRY there IS LITTLE PROSPECT THAT ANY NUMBER OF THEM WILL SUCCEED IN EVADING THE REGULATIONS WHICH WE WILL MAKE FOR KEEPING THEM IN HAND.

We have, etc.,

(Signed) BODWELL & IRVING, Solicitors for the Canada Western Central Railway Company.

AN UNFORTUNATE CASE.

To the Editor:—As a subscriber and constant reader of your valuable paper permit me to use it as a medium to bring before the notice of the public what I deem a very hard case. Perhaps the subject of my letter may not be a total stranger to the occupiers of the many offices and stores of our city, for if his story is true he has indeed spared no pains or energy in making a systematic tour of the town in search of employment. This young man is not one of your English dudes who swagger up Government street in knickerbockers, etc., for I have repeatedly seen him working at the hardest manual labor, in fact, the only work he has been able to obtain—and that with the greatest difficulty—has been of the most menial and uncongenial nature, for which he has not always received payment, having been—to use a vulgar phrase—"frozen out." This young Englishman has served as an officer in Her Majesty's service and has since held and I am sure is capable of holding again positions where intellect, energy and business ability are valued. Still I see him constantly plodding his way round town, and although he manages to keep up a respectable appearance nevertheless by his sunken eye and careworn expression I can perceive that he is in want of the common necessities of life. Were I in the position myself I would willingly offer this unfortunate employment, as I feel confident that I should be amply repaid by his industry. However, there are plenty of citizens in this town who are not only in affluent circumstances but who having great influence and successful businesses, could surely make some effort however small to put bread into this deserving one's mouth. BUY THE EMPTY HOUSES.

To the Editor:—Will you kindly insert a word or two for me in your paper about the choice of the electric light station site. Some time ago there appeared in the paper a list of what would be allowed for the site, building, etc., and I think that it there said that all that could be allowed was $19,000. Now, it seems they will have to spend that much or more on the site alone. Does it mean that we shall have to do with poorer and less lights than originally meant, or do they intend to ask the ratepayer for more money when they have spent all the $19,000. I am sure there are a good many ratepayers asking the same question. The present council have done considerable business in the way of saddling a variety of things on the city, such as the Jubilee Hospital, the exhibition buildings and now the electric light that promises to become more expensive than bargained for. It would not be a bad idea for them, whilst they are about it, to buy all the empty houses, hotels and any other buildings that don't pay.

A RATEPAYER.

THE SOUTH WARD SCHOOL.

To the Editor:—Please allow me a short space in your valuable columns to endorse the sentiments expressed by Parent No. 1 in last night's issue of the Times anent the South Ward school. I would go still further in demonstrating to those interested in the matter and others who listened to the remarks made by Mr. Hayward, that not only have the elevations been much altered and improved from the original "melancholy" designs submitted in competition, but that the "floor places" are distinctly different in many points; and this fact brings up again the old injustice practiced by some of our worthy trustees at the time of the inequable competition.

No one is particularly criticising the present building, but what is the use of these gentlemen trying to twist things to suit their own consciences and avoid censure for their unworthy selections at this time of day, and posing as public benefactors? Even now there are many things that might be said against the new south ward school, but that the building is a fac simile of the original selected design is an absurdity, and it would be useless, nay impossible, for the trustees who have all along stood out against the general sentiment of the people, to substantiate, so that it would probably be wiser for them to keep silence and feel satisfied that they were allowed to gain their point, unworthy though it might have been.

The public will still adhere to their opinion in this matter.

PARENT NO. 2.

PULLMAN'S STATEMENT.

The President of the Palace Car Company Talks About the Strike.

New York, June 29.—George M. Pullman, president of the Pullman Car Company has issued a comprehensive statement to the public with regard to the efforts of the company to keep its works open and give employment to its men. He says: "At the commencement of the serious depression last year we were employing at Pullman 5816 men and paying out in wages there $305,000 a month. Negotiations with intending purchasers of railway equipment that were then pending for new work were stopped by them, orders already given by others were cancelled, and we were obliged to lay off a large number of men in every department, so that by November, 1893, there were only about two thousand men in all departments, or about one-third of the normal number. I realized the necessity for the most strenuous exertions to procure work immediately, without which there would be great embarrassment, not only to the employees and their families at Pullman, but also to those living in the immediate vicinity, including between seven hundred and eight hundred employees who had purchased homes and to whom employment was absolutely necessary. We discussed matters with the managers of the works, and the result of this discussion was a revision in piece work prices, which, in the absence of any information to the contrary, I supposed to be acceptable to the men under the circumstances. Under these conditions, and with lower prices upon all materials, I personally undertook the work of letting of cars, and by making lower bids than other manufacturers I secured work enough to gradually increase our force from 2200 to about 4200, the number employed according to the April pay rolls in all capacities at Pullman. The result has been accomplished merely by a reduction in wages, but the company has borne its full share by eliminating from its estimates the use of capital, machinery, and in many cases even going below that and taking work at a considerable loss. During the night of May 10th a strike was decided upon, and accordingly next day about 2500 of the employees quit, leaving about 600 at work, of whom very few were skilled workmen. As it was found impracticable to keep the shops in operation with a force thus diminished and disorganized, the next day those remaining were necessarily laid off, and no work has since been done in the shops. The pay rolls at the time amounted to about $7000 a day, and were reduced $5500 by the strike, so that during the period of little more than six weeks which has elapsed, the employees who quit work have deprived themselves and their comrades of earnings of more than $200,000."

THE CONTEST.

A Meeting at Englishman's River—Mr. Bryden Takes his Touters.

Nanaimo, June 29.—A political meeting was held at Englishman's River on Thursday in the interest of Mr. J. Bryden to which the opposition candidate was invited. The meeting was not a large one, only 22 electors being present from Wellington and 18 from the vicinity of the river. It is evident that Mr. Bryden is afraid to trust himself among a lot of strangers without taking with him his factotem and a large number of his body guard. Of course Mr. Bryden was well applauded in his remarks; that was what the Wellington men were taken along for, and certainly they performed their duty faithfully, even to interrupting Mr. Smith occasionally. The residents of the river saw through the scheme and in consequence Mr. Smith received a very good reception from them.

The three labor candidates' committee rooms are situated in the Sampson building, where they are nightly making things lively for the electors.

A RAY OF LIGHT.

A General Feeling of Better Times in the Commercial World.

New York, June 29.—The reports to the commercial agencies tend toward confirming the views expressed last week concerning a ray of light in the business world. Considerable improvement is noted in retail business of many lines east and west, and this in turn has had its effect upon wholesale and manufacturing industries. The outlook for the textile trade in New England is also brighter although the improvement cannot yet be regarded as pronounced. The termination of the coal strike will have a good influence on trade in country districts as soon as the next pay day is reached.

Churchill's Visit.

New York, June 29.—The announcement that Lord Randolph Churchill, who at one time promised to become the leader of the Conservative parliamentary party in England, will shortly visit this city on his way for a tour of the world, has scarcely created a ripple in society circles. When he was last here a few years ago with his American wife, formerly Miss Jennie Jerome, he was a social lion, and entertainments innumerable were given in his honor. Since that time, however, he has gradually fallen into poor repute, largely through his eccentricities and his questionable habits. A few months ago he made an exhibition of himself in the house of commons that created a national sensation, and was regarded as putting an end, for a time at least, to his usefulness as a legislator. His tour of the world is undertaken at the explicit command of his physicians. He will not be accompanied by his wife, who is now shining as the bright particular star of the Marlborough House set.

"Bright boy of your's?" "You bet!" "Be president some day." "Shouldn't wonder—he's mighty good at fishin'!"

—When anything of real worth appears there is sure to be appreciative response. At this moment Priestly's dress fabrics are worn by most of the well dressed ladies of Great Britain. They have the foundation of durability; but they add grace to merit. They are manufactured to realize a tasteful woman's ideal in dress—fineness of texture with softness of effect—in the folds, flowing lines without formality. Ladies who have worn Priestly's black dress goods will never think of wearing any other, the satisfaction is so complete with them. The trade mark is "The Varnished Board."

—Old timers, says the Columbian, protest against the change in the spelling of the name of the landing where passengers by the C. P. R. now take the steamer for the coast. "Cat's" Landing is its proper name, they say, not "Kats," as it has been spelled lately. Cat's Landing received its name from the following incident: In the early days, when the steamers took freight and passengers as far as Yale, a cat domiciled on old Captain Irving's steamer went ashore at that point (an Indian reserve) and had a litter of kittens in the bush. A few weeks later, when the steamer made another stop there, the old cat and her kittens walked on board. The stopping place was christened "Cat's Landing" then and there, and has been known by that name ever since.

—W. Pellew Harvey, F. C. S., formerly of Golden B.C., has opened a very completely equipped laboratory in Vancouver. In connection with his office there wil be an experimental plant for treating various ores by the cyanide process, where parcels of 100 to 2000 lbs. can be treated by arrangement.

Sea jumped from the car and escaped without injury.

—Walter Oakes, superintendent of the Puget Sound and Alaska division of the Northern Pacific, was in the city yesterday, leaving in the evening for the Sound. He stated before leaving that he did not believe the company would have any trouble over the Pullman strike. It owns a half interest in the Pullmans which it runs and Mr. Oakes believes the other half would be purchased rather than see the line tied up in that respect. He is of the opinion that if there is any trouble over the dispute that freights will not be delayed. The line has a large amount of freight moving and will clear it up if it is possible to do so.

—The concert given in Institute hall last evening by Madame Laird and her pupils was largely attended. The audience fully appreciated the excellent programme presented. Miss Agnes Dawson, L. R. A. M., opened with a prelude by Chopin, the audience calling for an encore. She also sang Polacca Brilliante (Weber) with delicacy. Ernest Wolfe's violin solos were as usual well received. He was accompanied by Miss Leach. Almost the best things heard at a Victoria concert for some time were the double quartettes by male voices under the leadership of Mr. Greig. They sang the "Night" and "Poculum." The singing of "Robert toi que j'aime" by Madame Laird received well merited applause, as did also her rendition of "Valse" (Gregh). Mrs. Burton and Miss L. Hartnagle sang the vocal duet, "Guard a che Bianca Luna," and Miss Hartnagle was also heard in a solo, "Seville" (Dessauer). Both were sung with much taste. Miss Lizzie Harvey sang "Where'er You Go" (Lord Somerset).

—A contract for the schooner Ella Johnson was closed yesterday, the owners, Hansen & Johnson, leasing the vessel to J. C. Nixon and Captain C. E. Miner for a period of six months, says Thursday's Seattle Telegraph. The schooner will be used by Messrs. Nixon and Miner to take the place of the Henry Dennis, which was recently wrecked off the Japan coast. The vessel now lies at Schwabacher's wharf at the foot of Union street, and a number of carpenters are busily engaged in fitting her up for the cruise. She is neat in appearance, has a net tonnage of 106 tons and Capt. Nixon states that he believes her to be a good, seaworthy vessel. The boat has never had the test of an ocean trip, so that it remains to be seen what she will do. Captain Nixon states that the boat will be ready for sea on Saturday or Monday, and that she will probably leave on the latter day in command of Captain Miner. Indians will be employed in hunting seals. The boat, if no unforeseen accident occurs, will be in Behring Sea on August 1. If the trip proves to be a successful one and the boat is all that is claimed, the probabilities are that Messrs. Nixon and Miner will purchase it.

—A novelty in a programme of athletic sports in Victoria will be introduced at the St. Andrew's and Caledonian society picnic on the 4th of July next in the shape of a football competition confined to five men on each side, the game lasting ten minutes, five each way. Several teams have signified their intention of competing and some exciting games will be witnessed. The time being short the matches will of a necessity be very hard and fast.

—Charles Freedman, Charles Westcott and Jeff Howeth were in the police court this morning on a summons charging them with vagrancy. They were represented by George E. Powell, and the case of Freedman was taken up first. The police swore that he was an idle person and had no visible means of support, but it came out in the cross-examination of Sergeant Levin that he had seen him tending bar in the Delmonico. The sergeant also believed that he paid his debts. The defence claimed that he was a barkeeper and bookkeeper in the Delmonico. Mr. Jackson and defendant swore that he had been engaged in such capacity for fifteen months. The court reserved judgment until July 6th, to which date the other cases were adjourned.

MR. COLQUHOUN'S BODY FOUND.

It Was Recovered This Morning Close to Macaulay Point.

The body of Joseph Colquhoun, who with Fallow Vernon, was drowned off Macaulay Point on the night of Friday, June 8, was recovered this morning. It was found within a short distance of the point where the sloop Undine capsized and sank. It was seen first by a man who was walking on the beach, the body being held fast in a lot of kelp. The assistance of some of the Royal Marines corps was obtained, a rope was made fast around the body, and it was towed to the city. Constable Campbell of the Provincial Police, took charge of the case, the body was taken from the water at the foot of Yates street, and conveyed to the public morgue. There will very likely be an inquest this evening, and the funeral will take place to-morrow or next day.

The circumstances of the drowning accident are well remembered. Mr. Colquhoun and his companion started for William Head, where they were employed, and their boat capsized off Macaulay Point. William Pooley and an Indian named Dick made heroic efforts to save them but failed. The yacht club and the St. Andrew's and Caledonian society offered rewards for the recovery of the body, and the funeral will very likely be under their direction.

It has been decided that there will be an inquest at Provincial Police headquarters at seven o'clock this evening. The body has been fully identified by letters in the pockets and a diamond and ruby necktie ring. C. Hooker, who found the body, says it was in several feet of water entangled in the kelp. He loosened the latter and the body rapidly came to the surface. Mr. Hooker was towing a log, which caught in the kelp, and when he stopped to clear it he found the body.

Law Intelligence.

Justices Crease, McCreight and Walkem sat all yesterday afternoon on a county court appeal in Brooks vs. Ledingham. The plaintiff boarded with the defendant, his son-in-law, who kept his clothing and other articles for the amount of an unpaid board bill. The plaintiff brought an action of replevin and the defendant set up his line under the inn-keeper's act and also counter claimed. So far as could be learned from the argument, Mr. Justice Drake gave judgment for the plaintiff and refused to hear any evidence by the defendant and from this judgment the defendant appeals. Argument was adjourned in order that the facts which took place before the trial judge may be ascertained. Mr. W. J. Taylor for the appellant and Mr. Bell for the respondent.

NANAIMO NEWS.

The Electric Railway Scheme—The Lobb Murder Case Postponed.

Nanaimo, June 20.—It is almost certain now that the electric railroad scheme will not meet with the approval of the citizens. Even Ald. Churchill, who introduced the bill, has stated that he is opposed to it, and it is a well known fact that the majority of the aldermen are in favor of shelving it.

The murder case against S. W. Lobb has been further adjourned until Monday to enable the police to obtain more evidence.

F. T. Dunlap, colored, died at the residence of F. T. Gregg yesterday after a week's illness of asthmatic pneumonia. The body will be taken to Victoria for interment.

HYPNOTISM IN PARIS.

Dr. Berillon and His Patients—Growth of the Treatment.

A writer in the Philadelphia Times says: In Paris hypnotism is an established fact. In America, where it is looked upon as a branch of the occult and is naturally viewed with some suspicion, it is hard to realize that in the French capital it is in everyday use in the municipal hospitals—that specialists in hypnotism are just as reputable as specialists in optics, and that there are clinical schools where each day classes of students assemble to practice producing the hypnotic trance just as they practice the tying of bandages. The most unique and interesting clinics in Paris are the hypnotic clinics, and the head of these is the clinic of France's foremost hypnotist, Berillon. Cross the Seine at the Pont Neuf and walk up through the Quartier Latin to its centre, where are grouped the great medical schools of the University of France. Here, lined with tall, yellow buildings amid the rubbish of lading and the rattle of trucks, winds the narrow, crooked and dirty little Rue St. Andres des Arts. Over the great gateway of No. 49 is a little gilt sign "Clinique des Maladies Nervenses." This is the famous hypnotic clinic of Dr. Berillon, who, up to the master's death, was the favored pupil of the great Charcot, who first introduced hypnotism into the charity hospitals of Paris and drew upon himself 15 years ago a storm of medical ridicule by his experiments in the hospital of the Salpetriere. Berillon was associated with Charcot in these experiments, and since the latter's death has taken the reins and is now secretary of the Society of Hypnology and Psychology of Paris and director of Revue de l'Hypotnisme. Enter the gateway, cross the wide court, walk up a narrow, dark staircase, and you are confronted with a door and the admonition, "Do not knock or ring. Enter." At your push the door swings noiselessly back, and you find yourself in a narrow corridor where is displayed the warning, "Absolute quiet is enjoined on all entering this room." Here a neat, white-aproned lady assistant meets you and leads you into the reception room. This large square room is darkened by shades, and it is some seconds before the eye grows quite accustomed to it. Then one sees that there are others in the room. It is unfurnished, save for a few engravings on the walls, and about it are set deep comfortable leather-covered chairs. The air is almost oppressively still. The rattle of the street cannot be heard, and those who converse at all do so only in whispers. The whole atmosphere of the place is one of quiet and calm, and sitting a while in one of the deep, soft chairs, makes one drowsey, even without hypnotic passes.

Among the patients in the room are men women and children. Some wait in quiet apathy, some with extreme nervousness and some with all the delighted expectation of an opium victim awaiting his daily hypodermic. Some of the women look like nervous wrecks, to whom life has only one pleasure—the hour or two every day when, for purposes of experiment they lie in a trance-like sleep under the hands of Berillon and his assistants. Some of them come every day and have done so for years, for the process of hypnotism seems to carry with it a fascination like that of a drug and when a woman once falls into the sway of the hypnotic influence the desire to be hypnotized strengthens in proportion as it is indulged. Of the children in the room, one notices some who hold nervously to the hands of their parents and others who are evidently habitues.

Promptly at 10 a.m. the folding doors open, and Berillon enters with his chief assistants. Berillon is undersized with an extremely high forehead, deep-set, nervous eyes, and with a quick, decisive way of acting. His chief assistant is by name G. Mavroukakis. He is a Greek from Athens, and is tall, and almost as swarthy as an Arab, speaking French very haltingly. His face is made striking by a wonderful pair of eyes. They are coal-black, piercing and magnetic, and when he fixes them on you, he causes the odd feeling that while looking into yours, they are also regarding something behind you. Both Berillon and the Greek wear long white aprons much like those of ordinary surgeons. Berillon passes rapidly through the clinic, taking note of all present, welcoming and asking progress of old patients and putting rapid enquiries to new ones. New patients are taken in charge by the assistants, and are appointed days for treatment, and then with those with whose cases he is familiar, Berillon begins work. In the case of an adult, the patient is generally seated in a comfortable chair, in a half reclining position. A small table is placed before him, on which is a tiny instrument of brightly burnished steel. This is an instrument introduced by Braid. It consists of a pedestal on which are mounted two or four arms, which the mechanism of the box make whirl very rapidly. The whole looks like the governor on a steam engine, and the whirling arms are of such a shape as to catch the light and to throw it in a multitude of tiny flashes into the eye. The instrument is set near to and a little above the eye, and lying thus, unless the patient looks determinedly in another direction, his eye must be captivated by its flash. This is to tire the eye, and through it that portion of the brain which is most susceptible to such impressions, focus the patient's attention, and thus produce the first stage of hypnotic trance. Sometimes there is strapped to the shoulders a peculiar leather harness, holding a curved steel rod, which comes over the head and terminates in a brass ball. This ball, no matter what the position of the head may be, always hangs between the eyes and a little above them.

Perfect quiet is always enjoined, and after perhaps a half hour's gazing at the wheel or the ball, the operator finds the will much weaker and the resistance less. In treating a patient in this condition Berillon sits before him and speaks in a low, gentle, and rather persuasive and commanding voice as follows: "Look fixedly into my eyes. Good! Your eyelids are tiring. They are becoming very heavy. You begin to want to close them. You grow drowsy. The drowsiness spreads in your arms and legs. You feel the sensation of calm or repose. You are going to sleep. The desire to sleep grows upon you. You will sleep as if in your own bed. Sleep!" The last "sleep" he repeats several times in a voice slightly elevated and monotonous. Sometimes Berillon lays his fingers on the eyelids with a gentle pressure and makes long passes down the face and breast. The patient is left with the injunction: "Dormez bien profondment!" The stronger the sensuality of the patient, says Berillon, the easier to obtain control. Intelligence is absolutely necessary. Hardest to hypnotize are patients of a weak mind, and it is almost impossible to get any results at all from idiots. Idiots have no will of their own, and hypnotism implies the imposition of the operator's will on the will of the patient. The affection in the treatment of which Berillon's hypnotic process has been most successful is hysteria. This is cured by strengthening the resolution and by diminishing the number of crisis, or paroxysms, by "suggestion" while in hypnotic trance. The case is now being commented on in Paris of a woman whose nervous crisis were, in a three months' treatment, reduced from one every three hours to intervals of three weeks. To his treatment of hysterical patients Berillon first attempts to find the cause—nervous or otherwise—which underlies the nervous excitation. He then tries by suggestion to reduce this cause.

I remember the curious case of a woman of the lower class whose hysteria had, for several seances, failed to show any reduction. While in a trance, Berillon suddenly said to her in rapid, incisive French: "You do not tell me the truth. You do know what causes this condition! You have a trouble which you have concealed from me. What is it?" "Yes," the woman admitted. "I have. I did not tell you the truth. I had a lover a year ago who abandoned me for another woman, and I have never seen him since. I hate him, but I love him, and—I suffer." "When you awake," said Berillon, "you will have no hate against him. You will remember him only as a part of your past. He will become less and less to you, and finally you will forget him." The woman fought against this, exclaiming vehemently, "No, I will not forget him. I love him in spite of it, and I still wish to love him!" Berillon repeated the suggestion persuasively, while the tranced woman clenched her teeth and shook her head defiantly, but gradually her resolution became weaker beneath Berillon's will, and she ceased to struggle or exclaim against it. Waking an hour afterward the woman had no recollection that her secret had been dragged from her in a manner that seemed almost cruel. Some weeks afterward I questioned Berillon in regard to the case and found that she had been discharged some days before. Presumably the infatuation for her recreant lover had died. The curious question arises, if it is possible in the case of an illicit affection, is it not possible in the case of husband and wife, or in any of the other relations which imply human affection? A power that could thus weaken them seems diabolic. Three times a week the inner consulting room is turned into a lecture-clinic, and students of the University of Paris and medical schools who intend making hypnotism a specialty fill the room. Berillon reserves the most striking cases for this course of lectures and they never fail to be the most interesting. The student, to be a successful hypnotist, must have a strongly developed will, linked to that peculiar element which, for want of a better term, we call "personal magnetism," or "personality." He is first put through the theory of the school and then begins to work by experiments. Caged birds are experimented on with the aid of a looking glass, as are also some of the smaller animals. At length the student becomes an "assistant," adding his will to that of the master, until by constant practice as with a muscle, the power to hypnotise becomes strong. The young hypnotist begins alone with children, as they are easier to hypnotize than adults. The adult's personality is more fully developed and the child has less difficulty in resigning its will to the will of the operator. Sometimes the pupil requires the master's aid in his patient's first trance. The first is the hardest to obtain, but once the control of the hypnotiser has been demonstrated the patient has thereafter less power to resist. The power of the operator increases as the seances continue. I have seen a girl, an old patient, fall suddenly into a hypnotic trance while in the act of walking across the floor toward Berillon to greet him. That there is some danger in entrusting this teaching to young men is doubtless true, for they must often be tempted to practice outside of the clinic.

The Best Medicine.

J. O. WILSON, Contractor and Builder, Sulphur Springs, Texas, thus speaks of Ayer's Pills:

"Ayer's Pills are the best medicine I ever tried; and, in my judgment, no better general remedy could be devised. I have used them in my family and recommended them to my friends and employes for more than twenty years. To my certain knowledge, many cases of the following complaints have been completely and by the use of Ayer's Pills alone: Third day chills, dumb ague, bilious fever, sick headache, rheumatism, flux, dyspepsia, constipation, and hard colds. I know that a moderate use of Ayer's Pills, continued for a few days or weeks, as the nature of the complaint required, would be found an absolute cure for the disorders I have named above."

Permanently Cured

"I have been selling medicine for eight years, and I can safely say that Ayer's Pills give better satisfaction than any other Pill I ever sold."—J. J. Perry, Spottsylvania C. H., Va.

IMPROVED DISCIPLINE.

A Better State of Affairs Inaugurated at Westminster.

Visitors to the penitentiary during the past two weeks, says the Columbian, have noticed a great change in the management of that institution. The gate is always kept bolted, and a sentry, armed with a rifle, inspects every vehicle entering or leaving the grounds. A sentry in neat uniform is constantly on guard at the front door of the prison, and every officer on the staff, from the acting warden down, while on duty, appear in full uniform. Inside, it is easy to see that strict discipline is maintained, and the place has the air of a military institution rather than a prison. Every officer salutes his superior on delivering a message or receiving an order, and orders are carried out with a promptness and exactness which bespeaks high efficiency. The convicts are paraded for work in the fields in smaller gangs than formerly, and the proper number of guards are allotted to each gang. A guard is mounted on every stand on the walls of the fields in which the convicts are employed, and, except by treachery from within, the escape of a prisoner under the present arrangements would seem impossible.

The same state of high order is observable in the workshops. During working hours every convict is kept busy, and those so inclined can soon pick up a trade which will be useful to them in their after life. The instructors are thoroughly capable and go to considerable pains to instruct the convicts.

In carrying out the numerous reforms that have been introduced Mr. Foster, the acting warden, has not only added to the security of the prison, but improved the temper of the convicts. Every officer performs his duty cheerfully, and favor is shown to none.

CANADIAN NEWS.

The News of Eastern Canada in Short Paragraphs.

Rev. A. D. Chandler, ex-pastor of A. M. E. church at Chatham, is under arrest, charged with the seduction of the 14-year-old daughter of Nathan Murdray, a respected colored resident.

Joseph H. Pominville, bookkeeper for the Sun Life Insurance company, Montreal, who stole $1600 from his employers recently, was taken back from Chicago and sentenced to four years in the penitentiary.

The funeral of Archbishop Tache at St. Boniface was largely attended. Bishop Lafleche, of Three Rivers, preached the sermon. There was no procession, the interment taking place in the vault below the church.

The Donaldson line steamship Amarynthia, with about 500 cattle on board, on leaving the dock at Montreal for Glasgow, ran aground on Isle Roride, opposite the city, below St. Helen's island. Serious damage was done.

At Point St. Charles, Montreal, two boys named Collerette and Wilkes, were swimming in the river out of their depth. They commenced to sink, when another boy, named Wilkes, went to their assistance, but all three were drowned.

A. Drummond of Hamilton has received word that his brother Andrew has been shot and killed in Montana by one Frank Hartzell, with whom he had been camping. Hartzell was acquitted of the charge of murder on the plea that the shooting was in self-defence.

Dr. G. E. Fenwick, a prominent Montreal physician and surgeon, at one time president of the Canadian Medical association, dieed ono Tuesday. He was for some years a member of the medical faculty of McGill University, and his eminent skill as a surgeon was well recognized all over the Dominion.

Miss Minnie Hughit, M. A., who resigned her position in Bowmanville high school to pursue a post graduate course in Cornell university, Ithica, N. Y., has taken the degree of Master of Philosophy with the highest honours in French and German, and won the post graduate scholarship in the Romance languages.

From correspondence which has passed between President Hammond, of the Argonaut rowing club, Toronto, and the stewards of the Henley regatta regarding the eligibility of John J. Ryan to contest for the diamond sculls, it appears some one in Toronto has written to the stewards preferring charges against Ryan. President Ryan proved the charges groundless.

There is considerable discussion in Montreal as to who will succeed to the vacant Archbishopric of St. Boniface. The Rev. Father Langevin, of the Oblate order, selected for coadjutor of the late archbishop, is generally regarded as his successor, but the secular clergy are opposed to placing the control of so large and important a diocese in the hands of a member of any religious order.

At Indian Head, N. W. T., fire broke out in the rear of the Assiniboine hotel, occupied by Asa McIntosh, soon spreading to the following buildings: A. G. Richards' drug store, W. H. Lee's butcher shop, George Thompson, implements; building occupied by Cowan & Edwards; W. H. Bell's shop, occupied by F. Lockwood, stoves and tinware. All the buildings were frame, and were consumed in less than an hour. The loss totals about $10,000.

TOO MANY MEN IN AMERICA.

The Country Overrun With Them as Proved by the Census of 1890.

Marrying and giving in marriage is purely a personal matter in this happy land of independence. Perhaps more than in any other country in the world it is a matter of sentiment, and that so may it be until the end of time is the aspiration of all true lovers and happy wedded folk. But at the risk of brushing off some of the bloom of fancy from this subject, says the Boston Post, it is interesting to regard it in the cold light of figures which tells what kind of an aggregate is made up by the individual tendencies of the American people toward matrimony. Such figures are furnished for the first time by the census of 1890, former enumerators not having been concerned with this very important feature of the social condition of the United States.

The first thing which catches the attention in the tabulations of the census bureau is the vast number of young bachelors. At the age of 24 years only 20 out of 100 are married, and even up to 30 years nearly one-half still remain single. The women do better. At the age of 24 years nearly half of them have become wives, and before they reach 30 years nearly three-quarters of them have found their mates. As a rule women marry at an earlier age than men, and this accounts in part for the difference. But the fact remains that the vast army of young men of America remain bachelors at an age at which their grandfathers were at the heads of families and bound to the community by the strongest ties known in our social system.

Exact comparison is, of course, impossible, owing to the absence of figures for previous years; but it is safe to say that this habit of bachelorhood has increased and that the tendencies of modern conditions of life are toward its further growth. As the standard of luxury—which we have come to call comfort—is raised, the cost of maintaining a family becomes greater and the responsibility becomes more formidable. The young man who can support himself in ease hesitates to assume greater burdens, which must involve some sacrifice of his habits and may bring the need of greater exertion as a bread-winner than he, in his bachelor freedom, likes to contemplate. And so the young woman, seeing new opportunities of agreeable occupation opening up on all hands for those of her sex who have capacity for business, for art, for industry of many kinds, may be influenced by greater indifference to the sentiment which leads to marriage. Yet, which is the better state? If long life is the desired thing these census figures have something of interest to tell the young bachelors of America. They show that of all the American men and women who have reached the age of 65 years, 94 out of every 100 are married. All but six out of the 100 who have perished in their batchelorhood have dropped out of the world.

Lord Rosebery as a Poet.

The following clever verses were written by Lord Rosebery, now Premier of England, when he was taking his departure from New York after a jolly visit to the States during which he was entertained by the late Sam Ward, William H. Huibert (now a fugitive from justice), William M. Evarts and other convival spirits. It is interesting as showing the lighter side of the English statesman's character.

Alas! my Samuel, when I think
I stand upon the ocean's brink;
The time is near, full is my cup,
The buoyant Russia's steam is up;
With braided cap and fiery look
I see the unvacillating Cook;
He knows the time, he knows the date;
I, too, alas! perceive my fate.

The dinner comes; I know it means
A thick pea soup and pork and beans;
Supper, I feel, though waves be calm,
Bodes but a sardine and a qualm;
The breakfast, too, I will have learned,
Is only tea to be returned.
The British tourist barely feels
A decent interest in his meals.
And onward so, for many a mile,
With clammy brow and hollow smile,
With sinking heart and stomach sunk,
And only nightmares in one's bunk.
Swearing, when once you've crossed the main,
You'll never, never cross again;
Hating the world, the ship, the crew,
The heaving sea, the restless screw;
Hating the man with double hate
Who always eats as much as eight,
And gobbles, in the stormy weather,
As much as t'others put together.

And I return an unlicked cub,
Leaving the great "mendacious club";
The tales no more my mind shall fill,
And Hulbert's brilliant voice be still.
Though I revisit, I remember
Our only honorary member,
Whose bones repose on English soil
From all this unveracious toil;
But then what comfort can inspire
The tedious Formosan liar?
There's balm in Gilead or Gaza,
But none, I find, in Psalmanazer.

No more shalt thou approach my bed,
A bandit's hat upon thy head,
Beneath whose brim there beams an eye
That puts to shame the brilliant tie;
Beneath one arm a trout, alack!
The other holds a canvasback.
The pockets bulge with products rare—
French novels, prints and caviare,
Two manuscripts of odes and bets,
Old bills of fare and cigarettes,
Two-thousand-dollar notes, ye gods!
Weiker's accounts, green pepper pods,
And pressing calls to various duties
From railways, senators and beauties.

And then, perhaps, the bursting brain
Reveals its treasure-room again,
And recollections lightly wove
With tales of horror or of love.
Carry the listener quickly through
From Cochin China to Peru;
And, further yet, as in a trance,
From memory slightly to romance,
He hears thee clothe the arid fact
And scorns the fools who are exact.
He's borne aloft from Piccadilly
To California, willy nilly.
He sees the change, without a creak,
To banker, sportsman or Cacique,
He sees thee read with deep emotion
The burial service in mid ocean,
Or play, with one hand on thy knife,
A ruined miner for thy life.
By Tennyson or "dongo" sought
Probing a jockey's inward thought,
Counseling statesmen on finesse,
Counseling ladies on their dress,
A wit, a scholar and a poet,
A rake we fear, a friend we know it;
It is the lion and the lamb,
And there's your portrait, Uncle Sam!

And, losing this, what do I gain
When I have crossed the stormy main?
Why, if I land at Queenstown, bogs;
And if I go to London, fogs;
Where all the Egyptian plagues are rife,
And threaten darkness to my life.
For though the danger now is past,
That, as you know, was not the last,
And so I only leave the sun
To meet my fate as a first-born son.

And so, my uncle, dear, farewell,
At last I hear the fatal bell.
Well, Time is old and we are young,
And those who merit are not hung:
'Tis not the rolling stone that glitters,
Care killed a cat and other critters,
And so from Ecclesiastes,
The book of Nahum and Bombastes,
Or even Evarts, if you ax him,
Has always some consoling maxim,
And now once more the steamer snorts,
"Reef up her scupper, luff her ports";
Some foolish fancy dims my eye,
As, for a time I say, good-bye.

A FEW USEFUL HINTS.

Some Things to Avoid on the Journey of Life.

Never call upon people just at bedtime or during dinner or before they are down stairs in the morning.

Never stop people who are hurrying along the street and detain them for ten or fifteen minutes.

Never when you see two people engaged in earnest talk step in and engage in a miscellaneous conversation.

Never begin to talk about this, that and everything to one who is trying to read the morning paper or a book or anything else.

Never fail to keep an appointment.

Never inconvenience people by coming in late at church, theatre, lecture or concert.

Never delay in answering letters or in returning books.

Never tell long stories of which you yourself are the hero.

Never speak disrespectfully of your parents nor of your sisters. People may laugh at your wit, but they will despise you for it.

Never talk when others are singing or doing anything else for your amusement, and never the instant they have finished begin to talk upon a different topic.

When the blood is loaded with impurities, the whole system becomes disordered. This condition of things cannot last long without serious results. In such cases a powerful alterative is needed, such as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It never fails and has no equal.

JUBILEE HOSPITAL FINANCES.

desirable that this address should limit itself to a few observations suggested by the experience of the past and which may at this time, when considerable changes are being made in the management, lead up to inquiry and profitable discussion.

"Probably the subject of most importance and one necessary to be immediately dealt with is as to the future maintenance of the hospital. It is a subject for congratulation that by mutual arrangement with the civic authorities and with the generous approval of the ratepayers the institution is about to be partly freed from debt. This cannot but have a beneficial effect not only in relieving the directors of a large annual payment of interest, but in bringing the civic body and the ratepayers generally in closer touch and sympathy with the humane aims and work of the hospital; tend to keep alive the active interest and good will necessary for success. A review of the annual statement shows as follows:

"Expendiutre, $23,101.26; less cash on hand, $68.80; total $23,032.46; increase of liabilities during financial year, $5,886.91. Interest on mortgage from March 31st to May 31st, not included in the aobve, $291.67; total, $6,178.58. Total cost of operating the hospital for the year, $29,211.04.

"That a similar amount can under the present condition of affairs and the sources of revenue in sight be realized, is, to say the least, extremely doubtful, and it is therefore necessary to seriously consider whether its reputation and efficiency can be maintained on the reasonable expectancy of the coming year. Without agreeing with those who would limit the expenditure to a point that would reduce a noble institution to little better than a poor house infirmary, it is thought that some reforms in the direction of economy might be made, and yet maintain the high standard that the hospital has hitherto enjoyed. With this object in view it is respectifully submitted that the following are worthy of consideration:

"1. The subdivision of the directorate into very small committees charged with the oversight and responsibility of well-defined departments, reporting at regular and short intervals to the main body.

"2. The delegation to a chosen committee of ladies of some of the work hitherto falling on the directors, thereby securing the active support of those who can do much to popularize the institution, and who are besides more fitted than the sterner sex for these duties.

"3. Changing the present method of obtaining admission to the benefits of the hospital by insisting on a more rigid inquiry into the financial position of the applicants, and while excluding none on account of poverty, to ensure that those who can are made to pay.

"4. In utilizing the pasturage and land in connection with the institution, by keeping sufficient cows to supply the necessary milk, and also to arrange for having the laundry work done on the premises.

"5. By so dividing the duties of the consulting and visiting staff that the whole or the greater portion of the medical profession will deem it in the interest of their patients to advise them to avail themselves of the hospital appliances and privileges.

"6. To adopt a scale of fees for pay patients which, while being fair and reasonable, will be profitable to the institution.

"7. To limit the expenditure for a resident medical officer to a definite amount.

"In conclusion, to my colleagues with whom during the year it has been my privilege to associate, allow me to say that it is a pleasure to remember the regularity with which all meetings have been attended, and the great interest taken in all matters affecting the hospital's interests; and especially to note the kindly feeling which has prevailed amongst us; and although some of the preceding suggestions did not when presented meet with the views of the majority, it its hoped that in sight of a depleted treasury and an increased expenditure they may now meet with more favor.

"Yours very truly,
"(Signed) CHAS. HAYWARD."

There being some question as to whether the present six directors should retire or not, the directors resigned, and the subscribers proceeded to elect four directors according to the act of last year.

The directors elected were: J. S. Yates, Alexander Wilson, Wm. Chudley and Joshua Davies.

Hon. J. S. Helmcken proposed a vote of thanks to the retiring directors, whom he complimented for the manner in which they had managed the hospital. They had all done their best to maintain the credit of the institution. A change had been made necessary in the management on account of the debts that had accrued through no fault of the directors. It had been shown that a hospital could not be maintained in Victoria by voluntary contribution, and the citizens through the council had decided to assume the debts. The management would therefore devolve upon the two governments, city and provincial, and they were morally bound to generously support it. He hoped the hospital would not be crippled as heretofore.

The vote of thanks was tendered the retiring directors and the meeting adjourned.

THE OAR.

YALE-HARVARD RACE.

New London, Conn., June 29.—At five o'clock this evening the word will be given for the start in the great Yale-Harvard university boat race. The morning trains have been packed with strangers and an immense throng will witness the contest. The Harvard crew, which made a bad showing when it started out with its practice work, has been improving daily, but the Yale men appear to be in much better form. The Harvards row fairly well together, but it has not the quick, hard heave to the shoulders in the stretch that is all important. Yale has the advantage in coaching and muscle, while the crimsons have been weak in both particulars. The betting is strongly in favor of Yale.

THE WHEEL.

TWO PORTLAND FLYERS HERE.

C. L. Perkins and F. Stoyer of Portland, two very fast wheelmen, arrived in the city. Perkins is regarded as the fastest rider on the coast. He will meet Deeming at Nanaimo to-morrow and will also ride against him at Vancouver on Dominion day. The two riders went to Nanaimo this morning.

BASEBALL.

The Dominion Day game at the Caledonian grounds between the Victoria Athletic club and James Bay base ball team is attracting much interest in local circles. Some of the most prominent members of the champion Amity nine of 1888 will be seen on the diamond for the first time in years. Thomas Burnes, jr., W. Duck and George Gowen will play. The battery for James Bay will be S. Schultz and Gowen. Schultz has not pitched since 1890, and Gowen has not been behind the bat since he did the receiving work for Baker. Duck may also go in the box for a few innings as it is believed that his left-handed delivery would prove a puzzle for the V. A. C. team. Scott will play second and Gus Gowen at first, Williams at short and Franklin on third. In the field Duck, Burnes and Gold will pull down the high flys. For the V. A. C.'s Lenfesty and Smith will make the James Bay batters work to find the ball. An effort is being made by some enthusiastic supporters of the game to provide a trophy for competition between the local teams.

RUNAWAY ROCKS.

One That Went from Northern Ontario to Southern Ohio.

While surveying, in the year 1882, the glacial boundary across the Mississippi valley, I reached Cincinnati, having traced the border line to the river 25 or 30 miles above the city. Upon crossing to the general level of the hills in Kentucky I found various indubitable evidences that ice had extended across the trough of the Ohio, and left its mark several miles south of the river over the Northern part of Boone county, and up to an elevation of more than 500 feet above low water mark. This was along the watershed between the Licking and Ohio rivers, which was continuous at this height to the central part of Kentucky. Among other evidences one of the most conspicuous was a boulder of jasper conglomerate three feet in diameter, found near Union, in Boone county, which was subsequently transported to Chicago as a part of the Ohio glacial exhibit at the Columbian exposition. Its right to have a place in an Ohio exhibit was due partly to the fact that it was discovered by an Ohio man, but chiefly from the fact that, at the snail's pace at which a glacier moves, this boulder must have been in the territory of Ohio for an enormous period of time, long enough for a boulder to become naturalized. If, however, the Canadians should claim it as a fugitive from justice, they would have a prior right for the ledges from which it was derived, are near Thessalon, Ontario, to the north of Lake Huron. In searching for boulders in Southern Ohio, I was accustomed to hearing them referred to as "nigger-heads." In the progress of discovery it was found that numerous articles of that description, which in recent times Kentucky has furnished to Canada were in payment of a debt under which the Dominion had placed the southern commonwealth long ages before.—Professor G. F. Wright, in Popular Science Monthly.

A Montreal dispatch says:—A young swell, representing himself as Phil Armour, Jr., and son of the great Chicago pork packer of that name, registered at the Windsor hotel a few days ago, and through the courtesy of Jas. Allen, representative of Armour & Co. here, was introduced on 'change to the members of the board of trade and prominent business men. "Young Armour" purchased a large quantity of jewelry and other valuable goods, which he had sent to his hotel and partially paid for by check on Armour's agent. Inquiry from Chicago reveals the fact that the supposed Armour is a rank fraud who, after victimizing several merchants here, suddenly disappeared, and has probably gone to New York.
